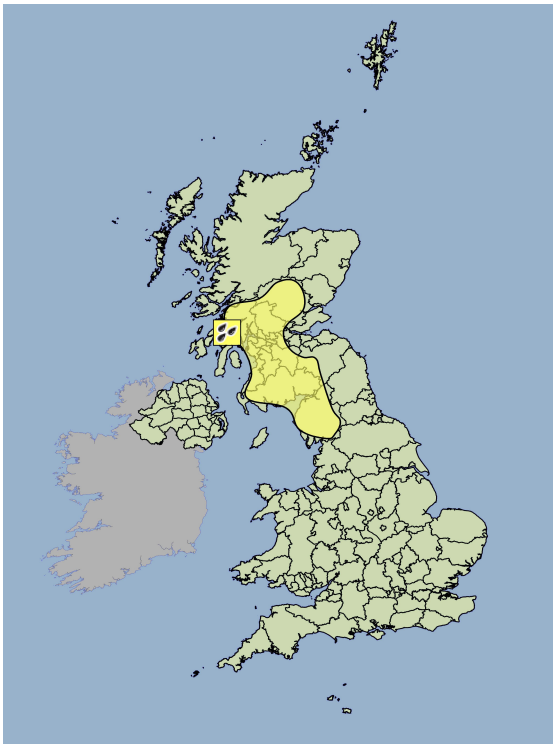
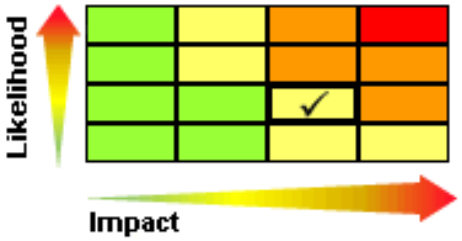
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A cold front will start to move eastwards across the British Isles during Monday, finally clearing eastern and southeastern England on Tuesday. This front will bring with it several hours' worth of rain, heavy at times, to the area covered by this warning leading to rainfall totals of 20-30 mm quite widely over the higher ground here and locally close to 50 mm. Ahead of this cold front a shorter period with outbreaks of rain is expected early on Monday. It is important to note that Monday's rain will neither be as heavy nor as prolonged as recent rain.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 17:00 on Mon, 07th Dec 2015 until 05:00 on Tue, 08th Dec 2015

A spell of persistent rain, heavy at times, is expect to affect parts of Scotland, northwestern England and Wales from Monday late afternoon or early evening onwards into Monday night. Whilst this rain will neither be as heavy nor as prolonged as recent rain, please be aware that in view of the saturated nature of the ground and high river levels further localised flooding and disruption to transport is possible.

This is an update to the warning issued on Saturday to adjust the timing of when the heaviest and most persistent rain occurs.
